admitting to driving faster than the speed limit due to less congestion and traffic caused by the pandemic; and only two out of three when they see an emergency responder out of their vehicle on a highway.

These survey results demonstrate a continued need for education and changes in driver behavior. Distraction-free driving is a priority for first responders (fire, law, EMS, towing, and highway workers) who put their lives in harm's way to help when emergencies occur.

First responders can learn free strategies to protect to help protect them during roadway operations at www.Responder.com.

You can find resources to help others to adopt safe driving habits from End Distracted Driving.

You can commit to taking the driving distraction free pledge by visiting the National Safety Council.
